

Figure 2: A chair form of cyclohexane, with substituents labeled "Ax" when in an axial position and "Eq" when in an equatorial position. In cyclohexane itself all the substituents would be hydrogen, while in a dimethyl cyclohexane two of them would be methyl groups (-CH₃).